

HOW THE APP WORKS

GETTING STARTED

Download the Trainerize app and log in using the email address your invitation was sent to. I'll reach out via WhatsApp to let you know when everything is ready and walk you through getting set up.

LOGGING YOUR SESSIONS

Every time you complete a workout, log it in the app. Record the weights used and repetitions completed for every exercise — this is not optional. It's how I track your progress week to week and make informed decisions about your next training block. Without this data, I'm guessing. With it, I can program specifically for you.

NUTRITION TRACKING

If nutrition coaching is part of your program, your tracking method is covered in the Nutrition section of this guide.

WEEKLY CHECK-IN FORM

Every Friday, you'll receive your weekly check-in form. Fill it in honestly — it covers your training, nutrition, energy, sleep, and anything else going on. This is the most important 2 minutes of your week. It's how I stay across how you're actually feeling, not just what the numbers say.

PROGRESS PHOTOS & WEIGHT

Progress photos are submitted every Saturday morning, fasted — before food and any liquids. We'll agree on your weigh-in frequency together, as this varies from client to client. All photos and weight data are for tracking your progress only — they will never be shared without your explicit permission.

MESSAGING

All communication is done via WhatsApp — not through the app. Save my number — +61 404 595 014 — and don't hesitate to use it. Message me any time — I'll always get back to you as fast as I can. Nothing is off limits — questions about your training, nutrition, how you're feeling, life getting in the way — send it through. The more I know, the better I can support you. Don't go quiet.

RESOURCES

Every Heavy House guide and resource lives in the Client Hub — including app walkthroughs, check-in and progress photo guides, and a direct link to my WhatsApp:

heavyhouse-links.github.io/client-resources

TRAINING

PROGRAM STRUCTURE

Your program is broken into training blocks, typically lasting 6–8 weeks. At the end of each block we'll review your progress and build the next one around what worked, what didn't, your schedule, your data, your progress, and anything else going on in your life.

EXERCISE SUBSTITUTIONS

If you can't perform an exercise — whether due to equipment availability, discomfort, or personal preference — don't just skip it. Message me and I'll swap it out for something suitable. Every exercise in your program is there for a reason, and a substitution is always better than nothing.

REPETITION RANGES & SETS

Your program includes both higher and lower repetition ranges to develop muscular strength and endurance. The repetition range is your target — always aim to work within it. If you're consistently falling short of the bottom of the range, the weight is too heavy. If you're breezing past the top, it's time to increase the weight. Complete all prescribed sets for each exercise before moving on — skipping sets means leaving progress on the table.

PROGRESSIVE OVERLOAD

The goal every session is to do a little more than last time — whether that's more weight, more repetitions, or better technique. This is what drives progress. Log every session so we can track it week to week.

REST PERIODS

Your program will include recommended rest periods between sets. Stick to these as closely as possible — rest times are programmed deliberately and directly affect the quality of the following set.

WARM UP

Always warm up before your session. For heavy compound movements, perform 1–2 lighter warm up sets before your working sets.

CARDIO

Cardio programming is individual to each client — whether you have cardio included in your program, the type, frequency, and duration will have been set with you before you start. If cardio is part of your program, log it in the app just as you would a training session. If anything feels too much or not enough, message me and we can adjust.

EFFORT & TECHNIQUE

Train with intent. Every repetition should be performed with control and purpose — sloppy repetitions done fast are wasted repetitions. If your technique is breaking down, the weight is too heavy. Good form always comes before heavier weight.

MISSED SESSIONS

Life happens — don't stress over a missed session or cardio. Do not try to double up to make up for it. If you miss a session or cardio, or think you might, message me so we can rearrange the week if needed.

INJURY & PAIN

There is a difference between muscular discomfort and pain. Burning, fatigue, and the feeling of your muscles working hard during a set is normal and expected. Sharp, sudden, or joint-based pain is not — if you experience this, stop the exercise immediately. Do not push through it. If something doesn't feel right during a session, stop the exercise, skip it for the day, and continue with the rest of your program. Message me as soon as possible so we can assess and adjust accordingly — don't wait until your next check-in. If you are injured or unwell, do not train. Notify me and I will adjust your program around it. I am a coach, not a medical professional. If pain persists or you are unsure about an injury, please seek advice from a doctor or physiotherapist — I can recommend someone if needed. I will always defer to medical professionals where appropriate.

SLEEP & RECOVERY

Training is only one part of the process — what you do outside of the gym matters just as much. Sleep is where your body repairs, adapts, and grows. Aim for 7–9 hours per night where possible. Chronic poor sleep will directly impact your performance, recovery, energy, and results regardless of how hard you train. Rest days are programmed for a reason — take them. They are not a sign of weakness or laziness, they are part of the program. Stress, whether physical or mental, affects your body's ability to recover. If you're going through a high stress period — work, life, anything — let me know. It will influence how your body responds to training and may mean we need to adjust your program temporarily.

INTENSIFIERS

Intensifiers are advanced techniques used to push past failure and increase training stimulus. They are applied to the final set of an exercise only, and only when specified in your program.

INTENSIFIERS — APPLY TO YOUR FINAL SET ONLY

ISOMETRIC HOLD

Muscles stay under tension without moving

Builds mind–muscle connection, sharpens technique, and helps break through plateaus.

DROP SET

Reduce the weight and continue the set past failure

Increases time under tension and muscle fatigue.

LENGTHENED PARTIALS

Repetitions performed only in the stretched portion of the movement

Keeps tension on the muscle and stimulates additional growth.

REST-PAUSE

A short rest (15–30 sec) mid-set to push out extra repetitions with the same weight

Increases intensity without sacrificing form.

SUPERSETS

Two exercises performed back to back with no rest between them

Used to increase training efficiency, boost intensity, or target opposing muscle groups. Rest only after both exercises are completed.

TEMPO

Controlling the speed of each phase of the repetition

Typically written as three numbers (e.g. 3-1-1: 3 seconds down, 1 second pause, 1 second up).
Increases time under tension, eliminates momentum and improves technique.

NUTRITION

YOUR APPROACH

Your approach to nutrition tracking will be discussed and agreed between us before you get started. Some clients track meals directly through the app's food diary, others sync MyFitnessPal, and some follow their plan without formal tracking. Whatever method we land on, consistency is what matters — the more accurately you follow your plan, the better I can adjust things to suit your life.

CALORIES & MACRONUTRIENTS

Your calorie and macronutrient targets are set for a reason — aim to hit them as consistently as possible. Protein is the priority, but all targets matter. You won't be perfect every day and that's fine — but consistent effort with your targets is what drives progress.

MEAL TIMING

Meal timing will vary depending on your program and lifestyle — we'll work out what fits you best. Overall daily intake is what has the greatest impact on your results.

HYDRATION

Hydration directly affects your performance, recovery, and energy. As a general guide, aim for a minimum of 2–3 litres of water per day — your specific targets will be discussed and tailored to you individually.

EATING OUT & SOCIAL SITUATIONS

Life happens — don't avoid social situations because of your nutrition plan. If you have something coming up, message me in advance and we can work around it. Make the best choice available, get back on track with your next meal, and don't stress about it. One meal won't derail your progress. Consistent poor choices will.

ALCOHOL

Alcohol doesn't need to be eliminated — but it's worth being aware of its impact. It affects sleep quality, recovery, hydration, and can make hitting your calorie and macronutrient targets more difficult. The occasional drink is not going to derail your progress. Regular heavy drinking will. As with everything, honesty is the best approach. If alcohol is a regular part of your social life, let me know and we can factor it into your plan rather than ignore it.

SUPPLEMENTS

Supplements are not a priority and are never a substitute for whole food nutrition. If supplements are recommended as part of your program, they will be discussed individually.

STANDARDS & EXPECTATIONS

THE FIRST FEW WEEKS

The first few weeks of any new program are an adjustment period — and that's completely normal. You're learning new movements, getting familiar with the app, finding your rhythm, and figuring out what weights work for you. Don't put pressure on yourself to have everything dialled in from day one. Your starting weights are a guide, not a test. It will take a session or two to find the right weight for each exercise — go lighter than you think you need to at first and build from there. Better to start conservative and progress quickly than to go too heavy and compromise your technique or pick up an injury. You may feel sore in the first week or two as your body adapts to new training stimulus. This is normal. If soreness is severe or something doesn't feel right, message me. If you're feeling uncertain, overwhelmed, or have any questions at all — message me. No question is too small. The first few weeks are the most important time to communicate openly, and I'm here to make the transition as smooth as possible.

WHAT I EXPECT FROM YOU

Show up consistently. Log your sessions, follow your nutrition plan, complete your check-ins, and communicate with me. You don't need to be perfect — but you do need to be present. The results you're after require effort and honesty, both in your training and with me.

WHAT YOU CAN EXPECT FROM ME

A program built around you, adjusted regularly based on your progress and feedback. Honest communication, genuine investment in your results, and a coach who is available whenever you need. I'm in your corner — but I can only work with what you give me.

CONSISTENCY OVER PERFECTION

You will have bad days, bad weeks, and moments where everything feels off. That's normal. What separates clients who get results from those who don't isn't talent or perfect adherence — it's the ability to keep showing up regardless. Progress is built over months, not days.

PROGRESS ISN'T LINEAR

Your weight on the scale will fluctuate week to week — this is normal and expected. Water retention, sleep, stress, digestion, and your menstrual cycle (if applicable) all influence the number on the scale daily. Don't read too much into any single weigh-in. Look at the trend over weeks and months, not day to day. Strength gains work the same way. Some sessions will feel great, others won't. A bad session doesn't mean you're going backwards — it means you're human. Stay consistent, trust the process, and let the data tell the story over time.

RESULTS TAKE TIME

There are no shortcuts. Trust the process, follow the program, and give your body the time it needs to respond. If you're doing the work and staying consistent, the results will come.

PRIVACY & CONFIDENTIALITY

Everything shared between us — your progress photos, weight data, check-ins, personal conversations, and any other information — is completely private and confidential. Nothing will ever be shared with a third party without your explicit permission. If progress photos or results are ever used for promotional purposes, I will always ask for your consent first. You are never obligated to agree.